Ice cream is an important food

Ice cream is a dairy food to be planned as part of a day's meal, and not counted as an "extra." It helps to raise the amount of milk and important nutrients in your meals. Because ice cream is fun to eat and everyone likes it, it is an especially good way of getting enough calcium into the diets of the entire family.

Today ice cream is no longer saved for company meals. It is readily available in many flavors and forms to fit any occasion. From everyday meals to the most elegant of parties, there are many different cake sizes to suit each family too. Ice cream is so plentiful and such a nourishing food to serve it often.

When storing ice cream, remember that, in order to keep it from a temperature well below 32 deg. F. is required. The ice cube tray in the refrigerator is not best for storing ice cream. However, you only have an ice cube section for storage. The best way is to remove from the carton and spread it on the metal tray. Cover closely with foil and keep in the ice freezing section. Turn the temperature control as low as possible and use within a week.

Freezers are becoming most popular as home equipment. Ice cream makers can be stored successfully for 2 to 4 weeks. If you buy in large quantity, keep the unit surface smooth and covered with aluminum foil pressed against the ice cream. This prevents air contact, which produces a waxy surface. You see, ice cream is perishable. The perfection produced at the time of packaging should be maintained by home storage. Ice cream stored over the best freezer to keep the original quality of ice cream spent over 30 days.

Temperature plays an important role in serving ice cream at the peak of perfection. Ice cream should be 16 to 27 degrees for full enjoyment. If too warm, ice cream

LOW MORTALITY RATE

Sweden and New Zealand have the lowest mortality rate of all countries.

New carrots for freezing

How do you freeze carrots? The U.S. Department of Agriculture, Canada Department of Agriculture, and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have been putting young carrots to the test over the past year. They have tested about 100 varieties of carrots, whole carrots and carrots cut into halves. All forms were tested by a taste panel and given equally good marks. The U.S. Department of Agriculture found freezing mature carrots to be the best way to preserve them. Freezing mature carrots results in less loss of flavor and nutrients. Also mature carrots can be held in cold storage for longer periods of time than frozen storage which is used to better advantage for other foods.

Directions for freezing:

Select only young carrots for freezing. Wash and pare very thinly with sharp vegetable peeler. Cut carrots lengthwise into 1/2 inch or 1/4 inch pieces. Boil in salted water for 10 minutes. Drain well. Place carrots in a colander and immerse into ice water for 10 minutes. Drain well. Transfer to second sink. Start counting time of blanching when water in second sink returns to a boil after vegetable is added. Blanch for 10 minutes. About one pound of carrots is enough to blanch at one time. Chill carrots immediately after blanching by placing under cold running water or plunging in ice water. As soon as vegetable is cooled drain thoroughly.

Pack vegetables into freezer containers or freezer bags and freeze at 0 deg. Carrots may be held in home freezer at 0 deg. for as long as a year if desired.

To freeze young whole carrots select ones not more than 1 1/2 inch in diameter at the top. Wash well. Blanch as above for 4 minutes. Plunge into cold water and slip off the skin. Pack, freeze and store as above.

One lighting was introduced in the United States in 1790 in Philadelphia.

MARKING ITS 50th ANNIVERSARY this year, the Royal Canadian Navy looks back at another anniversary 50 years ago, when its desperate quest of ships she took over six coverage American ships and Columbia, were taken over in September, 1941, and for the past few years they faced the heavy demands of convoy and escort work on the North Atlantic. Most had gone to a training role by 1944, and one, HMCS St. Croix, was the first victim of an acoustic torpedo.

Damage to tomato plants from chemical 2-4-D 'worst ever'

The damage to tomato plants from the chemical 2-4-D which has drifted into Saskatchewan gardens from farm fields sprayed in control weeds at the worst ever according to Stan Shand, horticulturist with the Saskatchewan department of agriculture.

Gardeners can identify 2-4-D damaged tomatoes. Mr. Shand said, by the characteristic curling and twisting of new growth and by the deformed leaves. He said most tomatoes are not being killed by the 2-4-D drift, but the plants will likely be set back in growth and yield may be reduced. There is no practical method to prevent this damage.

Mr. Shand said he believed damage was greater this year because rainy weather has made farmers late in spraying fields for 2-4-D weed control. Tomatoes have made more growth and so damage is more pronounced. In addition, more 2-4-D has been used this year than ever before. Sprayed 2-4-D can drift for miles.

Gardeners in Regina and Craik have been concerned with 2-4-D damage to their tomatoes.
